

Conceptual API flow. Each input unit retains an output, including when units share a batched agent. The notebook checks returned values against source data; timing and cost are measured for the chosen workload.